Hearing Resumed of Affairs of Dresser & Co. on Proceedings
Brought by the Creditors of Collapsed Firm.

ALVORD ACTS FOR ANOTHER.

Signed a Financial Agreement with Men Whose Shipyard Trust Revelations Brought Down to Wall Street.

The hearing in the case of Dresser & Co. was resumed to-day at the office of Stanley W. Dexter, referee, No. 71 Broadway. Those present were E. B. Whitney, the trustee; Attorney J. A. Hodge, for trustee; Sullivan & Cromwell, for creditors; Black, O'Brien, West & Gruber (by Mr. Gruber), for receivers and creditors; R. D. Murray for creditors; R. A. Morris and Charles S. McKennie for receivers and Justin P. Sheffield for creditors.

C. W. Youngman, President of the Corporation Finance Company, was expected to resume his testimony that was interrupted at the previous adjournment. He was unable to appear on Monday in the day. Timothy Callahan was asked by Mr. Hodge if he had knowledge of an agreement between D. Le Roy Dresser and Elmore D. Alvord. He said he knew nothing of it, adding that there were several other men in New York of the name. He was excused.

Signed Dresser Agreement.

Elmore D. Alvord, asked by Mr. Hodge if he had signed an agreement in April with Mr. Dresser, replied that he had. Timothy Callahan also had signed it, he said, but he did not know the man. It was not the previous agreement. He turned over $300,000 in securities of the Pacific Beach Mining Company, together with Virginia Railroad and other securities of the value of about $150,000. The securities he turned over were not listed.

Alvord testified that he had signed the agreement at a restaurant at No. 171 Broadway.

Mr. Whitlock, of the Whitlock Realty Company, said Mr. Alvord was the owner of the Pacific Beach Mining securities and the railroad bonds were owned by Alvord. He couldn't say what the bonds were worth, much less than $100,000. The railroad is under construction.

"Were you financially able to fulfil this agreement when you signed it?" asked Mr. Hodge.

"To the extent of the value of the securities," answered Mr. Alvord.

The witness then testified to the value of the Pacific Beach Mining Company, saying the stock was worth as high as $90.

No Interest in Them Now.

Mr. Alvord testified he had no further interest in the securities. Replying to Mr. Gruber's question Mr. Alvord said he did not know that anything on paper had any value "these days." He did not know that he had represented the value of the securities to be $350,000.

"Who put the value of $350,000 on the securities?" asked Mr. Hodge.

"I do not know."

"Were there any promises?"

"Lots of them. I was to have a very handsome cash commission through the sale, to come through Mr. Quimby."

Charles S. McKennie had seen the securities referred to and on representations made to him had reported as to their alleged value of $350,000. He did not represent Mr. Dresser in the matter at the agreement.

"What part did Mr. Dresser have in that agreement?" asked Mr. Hodge.

"He was to become president of the Richmond Real Estate Investment Company."

"What was the authorized capital stock of the company?"

"Three million five hundred thousand dollars."

"How much was actually issued?"

"None."

"What assets had the company?"

"None."

"What assets has the company now?"

"None."

SHERIFF SAW RYAN PAY JOHNS MONEY

But Relative of Lawyer Accused of Postal Fraud Denies Hav- ing Heard Iniminating Talk by the Prisoner.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 15.—In the trial of D. U. Miller and J. M. Johns for alleged conspiracy to extort a bribe, Thomas A. Delotte, Sheriff of Parke County, Ind., and brother-in-law of Johns, to-day testified to accompanying the latter to Terre Haute, Nov. 22, when Ryan was first introduced as Rose. Ryan asked the witness what kind of a lawyer Johns was and was told he was a good one. Ryan then told the witness he had just employed Johns.

Sheriff A. Delotte also accompanied Johns to Cincinnati Dec. 15. He did not hear the accused tell Ryan, "Here, I brought you the goods," or "It took a long time to get that signature of Christy," or anything of that kind.

He saw Ryan settle with Johns on that occasion by paying the balance of $4,500 in checks and cash.

District Attorney Sherman McPherson, examining the cross-examination of Delotte, asked the witness to explain copies of letters and telegrams. Miller had telegraphed that witness would receive a letter the next day. McPherson asked why Johns did not mail the telegram enclosed in that letter to his client (Ryan), rather than arrange for meeting Ryan in Cincinnati.

The witness stated that, although he had written contracts with Ryan, he wanted to see him to make sure of getting his money. He denied that payment was contingent on getting specific rulings.

BAKER'S OFFER TAKEN UP.

Dan McKetrick, manager of Johnny Burdick, writes from Boston that he stands ready to accept the offer recently made by Joe Baker to meet Burdick in person on a side bet. McKetrick says he has any part of $500, and if Burdick will let him place it with McKetrick, he has three matches to play and is anxious to have a

Clarence Leonard Disappears After Cashing
Two Forged Checks, and Katherine Miller
Disappears at the Same Time.

The police to-day have sent out a general alarm for the apprehension of Clarence H. Leonard, a youth under twenty-one, of East Orange, who is said to have secured $10,000 from two New York banks on forged checks. With Leonard is believed to be a young woman to whom he has been very attentive. She is Miss Katherine Miller, eighteen years old, of No. 7 Hollywood avenue, East Orange.

Miss Miller left her home on Monday, saying she was going to Fairport, N. Y., to visit school-girl friends. It has been learned that she did not go to Fairport.

Young Leonard was employed by Haskins & Sells, accountants, No. 30 Broad street. It was part of his duties to make deposits and draw the money from the bank for the firm's current expenses. As he had worked for the firm a year and had an excellent reputation and was well known at the banks he experienced no difficulty in having the checks cashed.

The banks that are said to have paid out the cash are the Trust Company of America and the Bank of North America. One check was for $2,576 and the other for $7,500. The latter check was considerably larger than the firm is in the custom of drawing and this fact caused the cashier to examine the signature again after he had paid the money over to Leonard.

Called Up Firm.

Not satisfied with the examination he called up the firm, and L. H. Conant, one of the members, hurried around to the bank. After examining the check he pronounced it a forgery. The other bank was then called up and the fact that a check for $7,500 had been cashed there was learned. This, too, was pronounced a forgery by Conant.

The banks notified the Pinkerton Detective Agency and the firm called up Inspector McCluskey at Police Headquarters.

It was while the detectives were making inquiries at Leonard's home in East Orange that the absence of Miss Miller was learned. Both the Leonard and Miller families are highly thought of in East Orange and both are considered well to do.

Carried Suit Case.

When Miss Miller left home she wore a gray walking skirt, white waist and a large black hat. She carried a suit case marked "K. M."

Young Leonard is said to be nineteen or twenty years old, somewhat under 5 feet in height, medium build and dark complexion. He has a small mouth and walks on his toes.

When he went to the banks to get the cash he carried a brown leather suit case which he had had at the office for a couple of days. It is believed he had planned to leave the city as soon as he had secured the money. Detectives at all steamship lines and all railroads leaving the city were notified to watch for both Leonard and Miss Miller, and their descriptions were sent to all the principal cities of the country this morning.

Believed to Have Eloped.

It is firmly believed in East Orange that the young people have eloped, as it was known to all their friends that they were desperately in love with each other. They met for the first time about two months ago, when young Leonard rescued Miss Miller's setter dog from an attack of several bulldogs. Their acquaintance ripened into friendship and then into something stronger.

Both the boy and the young woman moved in the best society circles in Orange. They belonged to the same social and church clubs. Miss Miller was an active worker in the Roseville Rescue Mission. They both live in beautiful homes and their families are wealthy.

At the home of the young man it was said to-day that about a week ago he announced he would have to get money and his father knew he was laboring over a scheme to get cash. As his father provided him with clothing, a home and every luxury there was no reason why he should want money for any other reason than to marry. His salary where he was employed was only $5 a week, but this suited for him money in view of the fact that he had everything else that he could wish for.

Boys' Mother Frustrated.

The boy's mother is prostrated and it is feared that she may not recover from the shock occasioned by her son's crime. The mother of the young woman is also prostrated. She has heard nothing from her daughter since she left home. She has positive knowledge that she did not go to her relatives in Fairport, N. Y., where she said she was going with the left home.

William R. Leonard, the father of the boy, is an officer of the Lorillard Tobacco Company, of Jersey City. It was said in East Orange to-day that he had called on the firm his son robbed and promised to make good the loss and aid the company in every way in finding the boy.

A demonstration of sensational value giving in the Men's Store of the Siegel Cooper Co.

One of the most popular garments for men is the so-called "Raincoat." Being a comparative newcomer in the family of Men's Apparel, the "Raincoat" is misquoted and misused grievously in many instances. There used to be a mark of distinction—this is it.

A garment bearing that stamp should be of high pedigree.

But That Used to Be.

Of late, garments made of all sorts of fabrics—ranging from the genuine imported Priestly's down to COTTON COVERTS and nondescript chevots—HAVE THAT STAMP. It may pay some folks to sell that sort of clothing, but this Clothing Store of our STATES FACTS, no matter if these facts are uncomfortable to some people.
